

FACULTY BIOGRAPHY

HOLLY BAILEY-HOFMANN, Assistant Professor of English

Holly Bailey-Hofmann, originally from the Philadelphia area, studied at De Sales University in Pennsylvania, St. Mary's College of Maryland (B.A. English) and the University of Cincinnati (M.A. English.) She joined West's faculty in 2003.

Prof. Hofmann teaches courses in grammar (Eng 94 and Eng 21), writing, critical thinking, and literature (Eng 101, 102, 103) and creative writing (Eng 127).

In addition to her English classes, Prof. Hofmann has worked as a Title V trainer at West, training faculty in technology-related applications and pedagogical innovation such as podcasting, ePortfolios, software applications, and online teaching and learning. She serves on the Technology committee and the Academic Senate, and is the coordinator of the Annual Student Poster Showcase each spring.

Her mission at the community college is to free students of academic baggage and give them confidence and renewal in the subject of English and as learners in general. Her interests include: languages, philosophy, cultural studies, language acquisition, historical linguistics, neurolinguistics, and learning styles.
